GDPR data exchanges control outside EU can be very cumbersome and very worrying

Transfers of personal data to third countries are regulated under Articles 44-50 of the General Data Protection Regulation (Reg. EU 2016/679).

Adequacy Decision is how Non-EU countries has an adequate level of data protection.

Where the transfer is to a destination which does not ensure an adequate level of data protection, controllers or processors transferring personal data, may still carry out such transfers provided that appropriate safeguards as specified under Article 46 of the GDPR are introduced. These safeguards may be provided by means of:

- (a) a legally binding and enforceable instrument between public authorities or bodies
- (b) binding corporate rules
- (c) standard data protection clauses adopted by the Commission
- (d) standard data protection clauses adopted by a supervisory authority and approved by the Commission
- (e) an approved code of conduct
- (f) an approved certification mechanism
